

Leadership Education in Neurodevelopmental Disabilities (GULEND)

Family Trainees

What is GULEND?

GULEND is an interdisciplinary training program of the Georgetown University Center for Child and Human Development. The purpose of GULEND is to improve the health of individuals with autism spectrum disorder and other developmental disabilities (ASD/DD) by preparing trainees from a wide variety of disciplines to assume leadership roles and to ensure high levels of clinical competence.

What is a GULEND Family trainee?

The family trainee is a parent, sibling, or other family member of a person with a disability. The family trainee participates in GULEND to further the development of critical leadership competencies as it relates to ASD/DD by attending a weekly seminar program, participating in interdisciplinary team clinical experiences, being mentored by experts in the field, and completing a leadership project. Through GULEND, family trainees have the opportunity to collaborate with service providers, policy makers, and advocates and share their own lived experiences.

What would I do?

Family trainees learn and work with the other GULEND trainees, sharing their lived experiences with the GULEND trainees and offering valuable personal perspective about disability.

What is required?

Family trainees participate in the GULEND program 10 hours a week, from September 10, 2021 through June 17, 2022. Participation includes attending the GULEND seminar on Fridays from 8:30-4, attending a variety of clinical experiences in the community, and completing a project with other GULEND trainees.

Family trainees receive a generous stipend for their participation.
